Guide to Student Advocacy in North Carolina
Managing Editors: Christine Bischoff, Barbara Fedders and Jason Langberg

Large percentages of North Carolina’s nearly 1.5 million K-12 public school students regularly experience denial of enrollment, academic failure, overly harsh discipline, unaddressed bullying and discrimination.

Now more than ever, North Carolina’s K-12 students need the help of advocates who are knowledgeable in education-related state and federal statutes, regulations and case law, as well as equipped with casework tools and proven litigation strategies.

This comprehensive volume provides essential resources to student and parent attorneys and others advocating for student success, including juvenile defenders, guardians ad litem, grassroots organizers and educators.

Authored and edited by seasoned practitioners, it provides an overview of students’ rights and how to enforce and seek remedies for violations of those rights.
