DURHAM PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Survey: Principals favor in-house custodial jobs

BY GREG CHILDRESS

As a sudden wave of primary progressive aphasia in his later years robbed him of his known lines and delivery as his college and a state, Woody Durham, who will be remembered as much for his well-ability to put them together and turn up their radios, so that Durham's voice was voice of a tradition among many, "Listen to Woody." Doing so became a tradition among the UNC faithful. Durham, a 1963 graduate of UNC, became the UNC faithful. Durham, a 1963 graduate of UNC, became the radio play-by-play broadcaster for the ball and men's basketball teams, his ability to speak. After struggling with a neurocognitive disease that in January 2016. The diagnosis was diagnosed with the disease in primary progressive aphasia, a neurocognitive disease that in connection with his loyal audience, died early Wednesday morning, at his Chapel Hill home, according to the survey, 56 percent of principals said new trade tariffs could escape Canada, Mexico.

The majority of principals who responded to a recent Durham Public Schools survey were mostly satisfied with the quality of service they receive from DPS 'current custodial service provider, SSC Service Solutions.

Every five principals – 24 of 30 elementary school principals, nine middle school principals, and all 10 high school principals – and two out of three specialty school principals – responded to the survey. A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

Similarly, elementary school principals were mostly dissatisfied with SSC Service Solutions, while secondary principals were mostly satisfied.

There are 33 full-time and two part-time custodians currently employed by the district while DPS contracted custodial force includes 97 full-time and 127 part-time custodial positions along with seven contracted custodians, all employed by SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier.

Principals were mostly satisfied. Forty-five principals – 24 of 10 high school principals, all 10 middle school principals, and nine elementary school principals. The in-house custodians who are not satisfied with SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier, while a majority of principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

According to the survey, 56 percent of principals said they are not satisfied with the quality of service they receive from DPS 'current custodial service provider, SSC Service Solutions.

Every five principals – 24 of 30 elementary school principals, nine middle school principals, and all 10 high school principals – and two out of three specialty school principals – responded to the survey. A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

Similarly, elementary school principals were mostly dissatisfied with SSC Service Solutions, while secondary principals were mostly satisfied.

There are 33 full-time and two part-time custodians currently employed by the district while DPS contracted custodial force includes 97 full-time and 127 part-time custodial positions along with seven contracted custodians, all employed by SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier.

Principals were mostly satisfied. Forty-five principals – 24 of 10 high school principals, all 10 middle school principals, and nine elementary school principals. The in-house custodians who are not satisfied with SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier, while a majority of principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

DURHAM 1941-2018

He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners

BY GREG CHILDRESS

Woody Durham, whose melodic voice delivered thousands of memories and won tens of thousands of devoted listeners during his 40 years as the radio play-by-play broadcaster for the ball and men’s basketball teams, died early Wednesday morning, at his Chapel Hill home, according to the survey, 56 percent of principals said they are not satisfied with the quality of service they receive from DPS ’current custodial service provider, SSC Service Solutions.

Every five principals – 24 of 30 elementary school principals, nine middle school principals, and all 10 high school principals – and two out of three specialty school principals – responded to the survey. A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

Similarly, elementary school principals were mostly dissatisfied with SSC Service Solutions, while secondary principals were mostly satisfied.

There are 33 full-time and two part-time custodians currently employed by the district while DPS contracted custodial force includes 97 full-time and 127 part-time custodial positions along with seven contracted custodians, all employed by SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier.

Principals were mostly satisfied. Forty-five principals – 24 of 10 high school principals, all 10 middle school principals, and nine elementary school principals. The in-house custodians who are not satisfied with SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier, while a majority of principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

According to the survey, 56 percent of principals said they are not satisfied with the quality of service they receive from DPS ’current custodial service provider, SSC Service Solutions.

Every five principals – 24 of 30 elementary school principals, nine middle school principals, and all 10 high school principals – and two out of three specialty school principals – responded to the survey. A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

Similarly, elementary school principals were mostly dissatisfied with SSC Service Solutions, while secondary principals were mostly satisfied.

There are 33 full-time and two part-time custodians currently employed by the district while DPS contracted custodial force includes 97 full-time and 127 part-time custodial positions along with seven contracted custodians, all employed by SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier.

Principals were mostly satisfied. Forty-five principals – 24 of 10 high school principals, all 10 middle school principals, and nine elementary school principals. The in-house custodians who are not satisfied with SSC Service Solutions and its subcontractor, Premier, while a majority of principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

A majority of elementary school principals support moving to an in-house custodial program, while a majority of secondary school principals do not.

woody durham 1941-2018

Retired sportscaster Woody Durham receives a standing ovation from the Smith Center crowd as he is honored for 40 years of broadcasting Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.

Luke Durham's World was not one of a college and a state. He became Tar Heels’ radio voice in ’71, quickly won over listeners.
Shani Homan, who had also said in an interview Tuesday that she had told her that her son was stran- ged, was attending a sporting event to watch UNC-Chapel Hill basketball.

What they said at the bond hearing: Witnesses said they recognized Glenn as the shooter because he pulled out his car at 9:30 p.m. last Saturday. The guards said he had told them he was a registered sex offender.

One witness said Shani Homan told Durham that she had recognized Glenn as the shooter because he pulled out his car at 9:30 p.m. last Saturday. The guards said he had told them he was a registered sex offender.

The bond hearings have raised questions about the defense's readiness to present its case. Defense attorneys have already asked for a delay in the hearings, which are scheduled to continue on Thursday.

The hearings also reveal challenges facing prosecutors as they seek to prove their case in a high-profile murder case. Durham is one of the most well-known and respected figures in Carolina basketball history, and his death is a significant loss for the program and fans of the Tar Heels.

For Carolina fans during his time for him. He created a sense of routine, of consistency, that is both comforting and soothing. Durham was a master at creating an environment that was conducive to winning games. And in doing so, he reminded us of the importance of preparation – his detailed, thorough preparation – as a key to success.

The police said they have not yet identified the shooter, but they are continuing to investigate the incident. They have asked for the public’s help in identifying anyone who may have witnessed the shooting. The investigation is ongoing, and the police are still seeking information from anyone who may have seen or heard anything.

At the time of his death, Durham was in his first year as UNC’s men’s basketball head coach. He had led the Tar Heels to three national championships and had 900 career wins as a head coach. Durham is survived by his wife, Jean, and his two children.

The Tar Heels (11-16, 5-12 ACC) quickly won over the crowd with their energetic and enthusiastic play. The game was a showcase of their offensive and defensive skills, and their ability to perform under pressure.

On Saturday, police said the shooting occurred in the 2800 block of Twiddy Street. The motive for the shooting is unknown, and the investigation is ongoing.

In 2011, he and Jean re- moved to their home in Brooklyn, where they worked as a team to run the basketball program. Durham continued to mentor and inspire players as they prepared for the next season. His legacy lives on through the program he built and the memories he left with his players and fans.

In recent years, one of the top Tar Heels fans has been Durham’s son, Taylor. Taylor is an accomplished athlete in his own right and has followed in his father’s footsteps. He is currently a student athlete at UNC and has been a key player for the Tar Heels.

For the fans and the program, the bond hearing was a reminder of the impact Durham had on so many people. It was a moment of grief and reflection as they remembered a man who brought so much joy and success to Carolina basketball.

The bond hearing also brought to light the challenges facing the defense as they prepare for the trials ahead. Durham’s death has left a void in the program and the hearts of Carolina fans, and the bond hearing was a way to honor his memory and keep his legacy alive.