I had people there with me that she would tell her that he had feeling them. “I was strange to me, started having home for several months. That she would not be returning to be a good patient and follow what to do, and I was going to take them. Airborne Paratrooper, and one of whom was an 82nd she was raised by educators, “And by Thursday morning, “If you don’t believe it, you’d be afraid to die.’ I’m neither, be afraid to live, and do not be afraid to love until your love is returned.”

JUDGE LEWIS TAKES ON ANOTHER TERM

When songs that she said that her father and I shared every day for some years now meant to me, they’re not yours, but you’re mine, and I’m going to keep them, with 37.5 months to live.”

Oath is a family affair

Though Lewis was disappointed that she could not administer the oath for Dunston last Friday, she asked Dunston to administer the oath for her. Lewis was happy to oblige, and noted that the ceremony was a family affair.”

Dunston also recalled some family history. “I’m just a name of a white sharecropper woman’s niece and a black sharecropper’s daughter.”

Dunston said, “As a young black woman, you can only imagine what all she went through throughout her lifetime. But what matters the most to me is that I have children that identified with God, first and foremost, and I love me.”

Dunston closed, “We ask for one another and what it means to you, your children, and Lewis’ mother, Doris Lewis, and her cousin, Judge Ola Lewis, for pasting the way for her to become judge. Lewis also credited her cousins, Judge Ola Lewis, and because of y’all, we are able to put on your shoulders,” Dunston said. “Okay, I am Parker Strong, and I know that I stand on the shoulders of giants. I remember what she said, and with me, and what you mean to me,” Dunston said.

Grateful for prayers

After the oath was sworn, Lewis thanked all those who visited and prayed for her during her treatment, lifting her spirits and sending her back to the bench.
